Is Business Networking Obsolete? Not If You Follow These 5 Commandments

October 28, 2016

Blair Nicole (Business 2 Community) featured our co-founder Jim Rosas in her article on effective networking.

"Do you think face to face business networking is something best left in the stone ages? If so, you're probably missing out on valuable opportunities to connect with potential partners, influencers, and even customers. After all, no amount of digital marketing compares to eye contact and a firm handshake.

The problem is that most people go about business networking completely wrong, and in some cases, create a bad name for themselves in the process. But business networking done right can truly set apart novice business owners from seasoned hustlers.

Here are five commandments from expert business networkers, to help you go from schmo to pro in no time." Continue reading on Business2Community.com

Go with a determination to enhance others networks by making strong connections. This mentality will set you apart from many at the event. And I guarantee if you go with that mindset business will come and you will not be disappointed
